Green hydrogen can play a vital role in helping reach net zero emissions within the coming decades and recently announced green hydrogen roadmap targets by many countries are in line with the ambitious climate targets. Green hydrogen from offshore wind is likely to see the fastest growth in the next five years among all renewables. This infographic showcases the options for producing green hydrogen from offshore wind and the parameters that need to be considered to make a feasible business case.